Introduction

This guide provides basic historical information about congregations originating in German Protestant traditions related to the present day United Church of Christ and lists records available on microfilm in History & Genealogy at St. Louis County Library. Information about each congregation is presented in the following format:

■ Congregation name, dates, and location

The last known name of the congregation is given. The Zip Code and telephone number are included if the congregation was in existence in July 2015. The year of founding (and dissolution if closed) follows the congregation name.

■ Map number

Congregation locations are keyed to maps of displayed in History & Genealogy at St. Louis County Library.

■ Historical overview

Includes dates and locations of operation.

■ Related cemetery

Location of the congregation's cemetery is listed if applicable and includes contact information, if different from that of the church.

■ Related print sources

Church histories and other sources available in History & Genealogy are listed.

■ List of records on microfilm

If History & Genealogy has records on microfilm, a list with the St. Louis County Library roll numbers, content descriptions, and date ranges is provided. The Family History Library (FHL) roll number is included if the records were filmed by the Genealogical Society of Utah. If microfilm is not available, researchers are advised to contact the congregation to view the original records unless another location is noted. Some original records are located at Eden Theological Seminary Archives, 475 E. Lockwood Ave., St. Louis, MO 63119, (314) 252-3141, sholl@eden.edu.

About German Protestant church records

German Protestant congregations kept records of baptisms, confirmations, marriages, and deaths of individual members. Baptismal and marriage records commonly include the names of parents and sponsors (godparents). Records were usually grouped by type, but sometimes by family unit (Familienregister). German hometowns are sometimes mentioned, especially in marriage records. Other records include members' monetary contributions, communion attendance records, statistics, and church council (Vorstand) minutes. Records were commonly kept in German until at least World War I.

German Protestant denominational traditions in the United Church of Christ

The United Church of Christ (UCC) was formed in 1957 when the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches merged with the Evangelical and Reformed Church. The uniting denominations were themselves products of earlier mergers. The Congregational Church, an Anglo-Saxon Protestant denomination, and the Christian Church, of American origin, merged in 1931. The Evangelical Synod of North America and the Reformed Church in the U.S., representing German state church traditions dating back to the Reformation, merged in 1934. Almost all UCC congregations in the St. Louis area originated in the Evangelical Synod of North America, 1840 – 1934 or its successor, the Evangelical and Reformed Church, 1934 – 1957. A few were founded by the Reformed Church or began as independent congregations.

Evangelical Synod of North America, 1840 – 1934

The Evangelical Synod of North America was organized in 1840 at St. John's Church, Mehlville by Louis Nollau, a missionary, and five other German clergymen. Originally known as the German Evangelical Church Society of the West (Deutscher Evangelischer Kirchenverein des Westens), the organization was initially an association to provide support for organizing congregations and ministering to the rapid influx of German immigrants. As it grew into a recognizable denomination, the Kirchenverein established a seminary and publishing house, held conferences with lay delegates, and published an official catechism, liturgy, and hymnal. Mergers with other similar Protestant groups created the German Evangelical Synod of the West in 1858 and the German Evangelical Synod of North America in 1877. "German" was dropped from the name in 1925.

Although the denomination was strongest in the Midwest, congregations existed almost anywhere 19th-century German immigrants settled. It held a unique position in that it bridged the historic division between Lutheran and Reformed (Calvinist) Protestants by creating a united denomination, as had been done in Prussia and other German states beginning in 1817. In spite of their united Protestant character, congregations outside of Missouri and Southern Illinois often used the term "Lutheran" in their names.

The Evangelical Synod established the Evangelical Preacher's Seminary near Marthasville, Missouri in 1850, now Eden Theological Seminary in Webster Groves. Other prominent St. Louis-area institutions included Good Samaritan Hospital (later Good Samaritan Home), 1858 – 2005; Evangelical Children's Home (now Every Child's Hope), established 1858; and the Emmaus Home for Epileptics, established 1883 on the seminary's former campus near Marthasville. Deaconess Hospital, 1889- 1997 and the Deaconess School of Nursing, 1943 – 2005, were operated by the St. Louis Evangelical Deaconess Sisterhood. Eden Publishing House, 1895 – 1979, and the denomination's offices were located in St. Louis. Elmhurst College, Elmhurst, Ill. was established in 1871 to provide a pre-seminary education and continues to exist as a liberal arts college.

The denomination and its congregations functioned almost entirely in German until after World War I. English began to be introduced into worship services about 1900. English became the denomination's official language in 1925, although many congregations continued to offer regular German services until World War II and beyond.

The Evangelical Synod had 281,598 members at the time of its merger with the Reformed Church in 1934.

Reformed Church in the United States, 1725 – 1934

The German Reformed Church, centered largely in Pennsylvania, dated back to 1747 and subscribed to Calvinist doctrine as outlined in the Heidelberg Catechism. The Reformed Church had largely assimilated to American culture when the second wave of German immigration began in the 1830s, but it had established new German-speaking congregations by the end of the 19th century. The Reformed Church has 348,189 members when it merged with the Evangelical Synod.

Only two German Reformed congregations were established in St. Louis. Salem, founded in 1888, was located at 14th St. and Sullivan Ave. until merging with Faith Evangelical and Reformed Church in Jennings in 1949. Maple Avenue Reformed Church, Maple and Clarendon Avenues, was founded in 1899 and disappeared from city directories by 1916.

Independent German Evangelical congregations

Independent congregations represented a third strain of 19th-century German Protestantism. Like the Evangelical Synod, they also sought to unify all German Protestants. Their “free thinking” (Rationalist) bent and aversion to ecclesiastical organization prevented them from cooperating with the more orthodox Evangelical Synod. Some joined with other like-minded congregations in a loose association that later affiliated with the Congregational Church.

St. Louis had three known independent German Evangelical congregations. Holy Ghost Church, the oldest German Protestant Church in the city, was organized in 1834 and remained independent until joining the Evangelical and Reformed Church in 1943. Independent German Evangelical Protestant Congregation was formed in 1856 by a group that left Holy Ghost. It relocated to Florissant in 1960 and has been known as Christ the King United Church of Christ since 1998. A third congregation, Bethlehem, was formed in 1878 when the Rev. Christoph Starck and a group of members left Bethany Church. It was last listed in the St. Louis City directory in 1903. Independent congregations helped establish and support the General German Protestant Children’s Home, now known as YouthBridge.
