

FOR THE RECORDS

Using secondary print sources for Québec research

Seasonal fishermen from Europe had been visiting Canada's shores for about 100 years before Samuel de Champlain founded Québec City in 1608, the first successful French attempt at a permanent settlement in North America. Central to the settlement of Québec, which itself comes from an Algonquin word for "the narrowing of the river,"¹ the Saint-Laurent flows by the province's major and minor cities. As time passed, the pattern of settlement moved south against the current to the sites of Trois-Rivières and Montréal, then to the Great Lakes region and eventually into what is now the Midwestern United States, including states such as Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri.

Although using original documents is always preferable, there can be occasions when secondary sources facilitate or simply your research. One of these times is when you are tracing your French Canadian ancestry.

There are four principal secondary sources for Québec research: Dictionnaire généalogique des familles canadiennes depuis la fondation de la colonie jusqu'à nos jours (Tanguay),² Dictionnaire généalogique des familles du Québec, des origines à 1730 (Jetté),³ Dictionnaire national des Canadiens français, 1608-

1760 (Red Drouin),⁴ and Répertoire des actes de baptême, mariage, sépulture et des recensements du Québec ancien (PRDH).⁵

These four sources were created at different times for different reasons. The first two are organized by family, and are similar in format to German Ortssippenbücher.⁶ The third, the Red Drouin, is a compilation of marriage records from the civil records. The fourth, the PRDH, is an extraction of details from individual records in the church books. All are based primarily on information from parish registers or civil copies. As a comparison, we will consider the family of Joseph-Marie François Moreau as it is detailed in each of the four sources.

Joseph-Marie François Moreau

Joseph-Marie François Moreau, a shoemaker, died on 2 March 1802 in the village of St. Ferdinand, Upper Louisiana. In later years, his descendants would refer to the place as Florissant, Missouri. What were the origins of CONTINUED ON PAGE 3.

Of the four sources, only the PRDH includes a record of Joseph-Marie François Moreau (Fig. 3).⁹ The record indicates he was born (N[aissance]) on 16 March 1733 and baptized (B[aptême]) on 17 March 1733. His father is recorded as master cobbler (maître cordonnier) François-Urbain Moreau and his mother Louise Huot.

François-Urbain Moreau and Louise Huot

Knowing the names of Joseph’s parents allows us to search for their marriage, which we know took place in L’Ange-Gardien. The couple appears in all four sources (Fig. 4).¹⁰ All four sources give the marriage date of 31 July 1730, and all of them provide the bride’s and groom’s fathers’ names (Edme Moreau and René Huot). All but Tanguay provide the mother’s name for each party (Françoise Forestier and Louise Parant). The PRDH includes additional information about the marriage, including the witnesses (other family members) and the fact that the bishop granted a dispensation from reading the third bann. Tanguay lists the children of the marriage including, in the case of Joseph-Marie, his marriage contract with Marie-Catherine Maréchal in St. Louis.

this man? At a first glance his name seems French, but did he come to this land from France or elsewhere?

Moreau and Marie-Catherine Maréchal contracted to marry in St. Louis (Fig. 1).⁷ In the contract, executed in the court of what would become St. Louis County, he states his birthplace as Montréal. A legitimate marriage required a priest and there was none in St. Ferdinand or St. Louis. Therefore, the couple made the long journey to Ste. Genevieve to be married, an arduous trip down the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, probably by canoe.

The marriage record in Ste. Genevieve (St. Joachim of the Illinois) states his parents were from L’Ange-Gardien, Québec (Fig. 2).⁸ Thus, there is strong evidence that he hailed from Québec.

The next step is finding the birth and baptism record for the parties to the marriage. We will consider the record for François-Urbain Moreau. According to Tanguay, the baptism occurred in 1709. The PRDH indicates a specific date, 13 October 1709, and states he was born the same day. The PRDH also gives the names of his sponsors (Fig. 5).¹¹

The final pieces of basic vital information concern the death and burial of François-Urbain Moreau. Tanguay and the PRDH alone supply this information (Fig. 6).¹² Tanguay indicates a burial in Montréal on 26 November 1737. The PRDH agrees with this information and also provides a date of death, 25 November 1737. The record lists his occupation as a bailiff (huissier royal), a position that may not have been very lucrative, as it also indicates the burial took place in the pauper’s cemetery (inhumé dans le cimetière des pauvres).

Edme Moreau and Françoise Fortier

As we move back in time to the marriage of Edme Moreau and Françoise Fortier we find records in all four sources (Fig. 7).¹³ All agree the marriage took place on 29 August 1706. A discrepancy, however, appears in the name of the bride. Jetté indicates her surname was Forestier. The others say Fortier. Tanguay does not name the groom’s father, but the other sources agree that his name was Jacques Moreau. Tanguay, the Red Drouin, and PRDH all agree that the bride’s father was Étienne Fortier. Jetté gives his name as Étienne Forestier. With the exception of Tanguay, which never lists the mother of the bride or groom, all the sources confirm the groom’s mother as Marguerite Germain and the bride’s mother as Marguerite Lauzon. Because all of these are secondary sources, the only way to resolve the conflicts is to check the original parish records.

The original marriage register at Montréal (Notre-Dame) (Fig. 8)¹⁴ uses the name Fortier for both father and daughter. While that would appear to clear up the matter, further confusion arises with Françoise Fortier’s baptism. In the record of the Edme Moreau family, Tanguay identifies her father as Étienne Fortier. Yet he includes no family headed by such a person. Instead, he is listed as Étienne Forestier with wife Marguerite Lauzon. The PRDH agrees with the Forestier spelling. Both sources give a baptism date of 13 February 1685 (Fig. 9).¹⁵

Looking at the original record, the name is clearly written as Forestier. Apparently, at some point, the name changed from Forestier to Fortier. The difference may result from a spelling change that saw the unpronounced “s” gradually drop from many French words, including from the likely root word “forêt,” which was formerly spelled “forest.”(Fig. 10).¹⁶

None of the sources record the death of Françoise Fortier. Likewise, no death record has been found for her in the parish records.

Étienne Forestier dit Lafortune and Margurite Lauzon

All four of the sources use the surname Forestier for the marriage of Françoise’s parents. They all also concur on the date of the marriage, 23 November 1672 in Montréal (Fig. 11).¹⁷ The four sources provide different places of origin for Étienne’s parents Étienne and Judith Fonton. According to Tanguay, they came from St. Jean d’Angély, évêché de Xaintes (bishopric or diocese of Saintes). Jetté says they were from St-Jean-d’Angély, év. Saintes, Saintonge (Charente). The Red Drouin reports their origins as St-Jean-d’Angély, diocèse de Saintes, Saintonge. The PRDH gives the location as France, Ouest, Urbain. These are all probably referring to St-Jean-d’Angély in Charente-Maritime.

Tanguay, Jetté, and the PRDH all report a baptism for Marguerite Lauzon, daughter of Giles Lauzon and Marie Archambault, on 24 May 1659 in Montréal. The PRDH spells her surname Lozon, and that of her mother Archambaud (Fig. 12).¹⁸ All three sources also report her burial on 14 November 1699, with Jetté and the PRDH also reporting her death on the previous day. Once again the PRDH uses the Lozon spelling (Fig. 13).¹⁹

Giles Lauzon and Marie Archambault

Marguerite's parents, Giles Lauzon and Marie Archambault, were married 27 November 1656 in Montréal according to all four sources (Fig. 14).²⁰ Tanguay and Jetté both state Lauzon was a (master) smith [(maître) chaudronnier]. All four sources indicate he was born in France, the son of Pierre Lauzon and Anne Boivin. The location, in France, varies with the source. Tanguay says St. Julien, évêché du Mans. Jetté says St-Julien, v. (ville) et ar. (arrondissement) Caen, év. (évêché/diocèse) Bayeux, Normandie (Calvados). The Red Drouin gives the place as St-Julien de Caen, Normandie, and the PRDH simply says Normandie, France. Marie Archambault's father was Jacques Archambault in all four sources. All but Tanguay say her mother was Françoise Toreau or Tourault.

None of the sources provide a specific birth place or date for Marie Archambault, although it is believed she was born in France and emigrated to Canada with her parents three years previously. Tanguay, Jetté, and the PRDH all agree, however, that she was buried on 8 August 1685. Her exact date of death is unknown (Fig. 15).²¹

Jacques Archambault and Françoise Toreau

Marie's parents, Jaques Archambault and Françoise Toreau, married in France and moved to Québec with their children. Jetté states their marriage occurred on 24 January 1629 at St-Philibert du Pont-Charault, év. Luçon, Poitou (Vendée), but the record was not found in a search of the records of that parish. The same source names Jacques' parents Antoine Archambault and Renée Ouvrard of Lardillière à Dompierre-sur-Mer, ar. et év. La Rochelle, Aunis (Charente-Maritime).

Françoise Toreau's parents are not named, but she is said to be of the same place as her husband and his parents (Fig. 16).²²

Because they died in Québec, their burials were recorded in the records and are included in Tanguay, Jetté, and the PRDH (Fig. 17).²³ All three sources concur in stating Françoise Toreau was buried on 9 December 1663 in Montréal and Jacques Archambault was buried at the same place on 15 February 1688. Jetté also notes that Archambault took a second wife, Marie Denot, widow (veuve) of Louis Ozanne on 26 January 1666.

Evaluating the sources and developing a research strategy

When used together, these four principal secondary sources can provide a researcher with a reasonable overview of their lineage from the early 1800s back to their arrival in North America. Moving beyond Québec to France is a challenge, however. In many cases, the sources do not agree on a hometown, and often the place(s) named do not actually exist. This problem most likely stems from the original record. Québec priests would unlikely know the names and proper spelling of every community in France. Instead, they wrote down what they heard or what they thought they heard.

A reasonable approach would begin with Tanguay and Jetté. Between the two, it should be easy to develop four-generation charts and family-group sheets taking the family back through the earliest days of New France. Use the Red Drouin to help fill in any gaps. This isn't to say the process will be fast. In genealogical research, as in most endeavors, sometimes we require inspiration, at other times we merely require perspiration. This will definitely be the case with the latter.

Next, consult the PRDH. This should be relatively easy because you will already have the names and dates from your previous work. This will fill in additional information.

While it might be tempting to stop at this point, it is recommended that you consult the original records. The Québec parish registers are available digitally on FamilySearch.org.²⁴ This will enable you to resolve any questions caused by the secondary sources and ultimately provide the best evidence to support your conclusions. Genealogical research in Québec can take those who explore it through many generations and hundreds of years of history. The records go a long way back in time, and the secondary print resources make them accessible.

Overview of print sources for Québec research

The following sources are available in print in the History & Genealogy Department.

Dictionnaire généalogique des familles canadiennes depuis la fondation de la colonie jusqu'à nos jours Cyprien Tanguay, R 971.4 T164D

When Cyprien Tanguay, a Canadian priest, published the first volume of his genealogical dictionary in 1871, it was the first of its kind in French Canadian research. In his introduction, Tanguay concedes that the idea of creating a dictionary for all French Canadian families might seem “a little strange at first,”[1] but Tanguay saw several uses: a way for clergy to confirm that those intending to marry were not too closely related; to aid producing documentation for court; and as a matter of national historic interest.

Tanguay’s dictionary traces the lineages of French Canadian families to as late as the early 1800s. While later genealogical dictionaries tended to stay confined to Canada, Tanguay followed many families outside of Québec to the Pays des Illinois, or Illinois Country, what is now the Midwestern United States. Notably, his dictionary provides some information from the burned Holy Family parish register in Cahokia, Illinois, from a source that has since been lost.[2]

An easily navigable online version of Tanguay’s genealogical dictionary is provided by the Bibliothèque et Archives nationales du Québec <<https://bit.ly/2Ky7O9J>>. J.-Arthur Leboeuf published corrections and additions to Tanguay’s work in 1957 as Complément au dictionnaire généalogique Tanguay (971.4 L447C).

Dictionnaire national des canadiens français (1608-1760) Institut généalogique Drouin, R 971.4 D554

This dictionary, also known as the “Red Drouin,” was originally published by the Institut Généalogique Drouin starting in the late 1950s. It is comprised of two volumes of marriage indexes sorted by the groom’s surname. A third volume contains brief biographies and copies of signatures of French Canadians, ranging from early settlers to those executed for taking part in the Rebellions of 1837-8.

Joseph Drouin, a Québec-born lawyer, founded the Drouin Institute in 1899. The company originally created family trees for its clients, but Gabriel Drouin, Joseph’s son, directed the organization towards loftier goals. From the late 1930s, the Drouin Institute microfilmed the vital records of Québec and other French-settled areas of North America, eventually replacing its role as researcher with that of the indexer or compiler. Following Gabriel’s death in 1980, genealogist Jean-Pierre Pepin “restarted the Drouin Institute...in an effort to keep most of Drouin data in Québec.”[3]

Today the records filmed by the Drouin Institute are available on Ancestry.com as the Drouin Collection. The filmed vital records are copies of church records that were sent to courthouses to function as civil records. Because of this, the collection includes records of many denominations throughout Canada.

Programme de recherche en démographie historique Hubert Charbonneau and Jacques Légaré, R 971.4 R425

The Programme de recherche en démographie historique, or PRDH, is the commonly used name for a series composed of several volumes titled Répertoire des actes de baptême, mariage, sépulture et des recensements du Québec ancien (R 971.4 R425). Each volume abstracts different parish registers, censuses, marriage contracts, and even early hospital records. Abstracts include not only the name of the subjects of a record, but also secondary parties such as godparents, priests, and witnesses. The importance of a person’s role in a record can be gleaned from the abstract, which includes a number such as “01” or “02.” For a baptism, a person designated as “01” would be the person baptized, “02” would be the father, “03” the mother, and so on.

The PRDH series began under the direction of Hubert Charbonneau and Jacques Légaré of the Université de Montréal in 1980. More recently, PRDH, in partnership with the Institut généalogique Drouin, has gone online as PRDH-IGD <<https://www.prdh-igd.com/en/home>>. Access to the complete information online requires a subscription, but the free search, which includes the year and parish of an event, is useful as a basic index to Catholic records throughout Québec.

Dictionnaire généalogique des familles du Québec des origines à 1730 René Jetté, R 971.4 J58D

History teacher and prolific indexer, René Jetté first published his genealogical dictionary in 1983. It had been over 100 years since the release of the original Tanguay dictionary, and during that time researchers uncovered several errors and found much new information. In honor of his precursor's work, Jetté gave a similar title to his own compilation, but he departs from it in several ways. Most significantly, Jetté's dictionary only concerns families before 1730.

While relying mostly on parish registers, Jetté consulted various sources and many entries show that through census information or arrival year. The front of the book contains lists of sources for exploring other records and topics in French Canadian research.

Jetté released corrections to the dictionary as a booklet in 1996. The first part of the online Dictionnaire généalogique de nos origines [Genealogical dictionary of our origins] <<https://www.francogene.com/dgo/dgo.php>> consists of corrections and updates to Jetté's dictionary.

What's the scribble?

In even the worst of circumstances, the names we consciously seek seem to jump off the page and seize our attention. Yet when studying a document that contains unfamiliar names, it can sometimes feel impossible to interpret the intent behind a particular loop, hump, or ghostly dot. A few strategies and secondary sources can help researchers assign real names to the scribbles.

Behind every church record is its parish priest or other clergy member who performed the ceremony and wrote the record. In 1694, a priest baptized and was godfather to Ignace Hébert, son of Ignace and Jeanne Messier dit St-Michel, in the parish of Sainte-Anne-de-Varennes.¹ While the signature the priest left is far from the worst, it does not make his identity immediately obvious (Fig. 1).

A work by Cyprien Tanguay, the Répertoire général du clergé canadien: Par ordre chronologique depuis la fondation de la colonie jusqu'à nos jours [General Directory of the Canadian Clergy: In Chronological Order from the Founding of the Colony to the Present Day] (R 971 T164R) can help to identify the priests and other clergy members in records. Biographies for each priest are arranged chronologically by year of ordination. When faced with a completely illegible name, the simplest way to use the book is to start at priests who became active around the year of the record, working back through the pages trying to spot a name that appears similar. An alphabetical index at the back may be consulted more quickly if the beginning of the name is clear.

Digitization of out-of-copyright material offers novel ways to search an old book. The Internet Archive provides an online digital book version <<https://archive.org/details/rpertoireg00tang/page/n7>>. By searching inside the online version for the town name, “Varennes,” we find in the results biographical sketches that mention the town. The second result concerns a priest named Claude Volant de Saint-Claude. According to the biography, he had a twin brother who was also a priest, and both were ordained in 1678. More importantly, it tells us that Claude served at Varennes from 1692 until his death in 1719,² putting him in the right time and place to baptize Ignace. Referring back to the signature, we can more readily read his name as “De S Claude.”

Several sources can aid in the task of deciphering the names of people who were not members of the clergy. A researcher might interpret the signature of Ignace’s godmother as Trudo or Frudo (Fig. 2). Indexes that cover entire parishes, such as the PRDH, are particularly helpful for determining the surnames present in a certain place and time. History & Genealogy holds a large collection of marriage indexes covering individual towns throughout Quebec, including Mariages de Varennes (1693-1968), comté de Verchères (R 971.436 J58M). The marriage index contains neither Frudo nor Trudo, but it does list several marriages by people named Trudeau, which is phonetically identical to Trudo.

Additional sources for identifying signatures and unknown names include online family trees, local histories, and the indexes that often precede microfilmed parish registers.

Family History Expo brings researchers and genealogical organizations together

More than 125 visitors attended the St. Louis County Library Family History Expo held on Saturday, July 27 in the Headquarters auditorium. Attendees, many of whom were new to genealogy, had the opportunity to discuss family history research with representatives from 31 genealogical organizations and research facilities. Brief informational presentations given in the adjacent East Room throughout the day were well attended. Door prizes were awarded to eight individuals.

Participating organizations included Association of African Ancestored Researchers of St. Louis, Colonial Dames of America, Colonial Dames of the 17th Century, Colonial Daughters of the 17th Century, Continental Society Daughters of Indian Wars, Dames of the Court of Honor, Daughters of American Colonists, Daughters of Colonial Wars, Daughters of the American Revolution, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, Eden Theological Seminary Archives, Germanic Genealogy Society of St. Louis, Germans in St. Louis, History & Genealogy at St. Louis County Library, St. Louis County Library Headquarters Circulation, Jamestowne Society, Mayflower Society, Missouri Historical Society, National Society Daughters of the Union, National Society of New England Women, St. Louis City Recorder of Deeds, St. Louis County Library Foundation, St. Louis Genealogical Society, United Daughters of the Confederacy, US Daughters of 1812, and Women Descendants of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co.

The next Family History Expo has been tentatively scheduled for Saturday, July 25, 2020.

NEW BOOK HIGHLIGHTS

RUTH J. ABRAM
Send Us a Lady Physician: Women Doctors in America, 1835-1920
 Norton, 1985
 610.922 S474

In the latter part of the nineteenth century, women, who had hitherto been barred from medical schools, were gradually granted the freedom to study and practice medicine. Indeed, by 1900, over 7,000 female physicians were practicing in America. Women were sought after to fill the void in women’s health care—a substantial one, thanks to Victorian mores—as well as to imbue the medical profession with dignity which only women, it was believed, could supply. Thus the stereotype of women as gentle, virtuous creatures, natural healers, worked in their favor, opening doors to a major profession.

The irony of women’s acceptance into the medical world, and the unfortunate decline in their status at the beginning of the twentieth-century, is illustrated in this volume through words and pictures. By focusing on the class of 1879 at the Woman’s Medical College of Pennsylvania, the authors of the various essays depict individual trials, frustrations, and victories of nineteenth-century women physicians; and we come to understand a vital aspect of our history and how it affects us all today.—Book jacket

JOSEPH W. MCCOSKRIE, JR. & BRIAN WARREN
The Civil War Missouri Compendium: Almost Unabridged
 The History Press, 2017
 R 973.7478 M132C

During the Civil War, only Virginia and Tennessee saw more action than Missouri. Ulysses S. Grant first proved his ability there. Sterling Price, a former governor of Missouri, sided with the Confederacy, raised an army and led it in battle all over the state. Notorious guerrilla warriors "Bloody" Bill Anderson and William Quantrill terrorized communities and confounded Union military commanders. Brian Warren and Joseph "Whit" McCoskrie provide a chronological overview of more than three hundred of the documented engagements that took place within Missouri's borders, furnishing photos, maps, biographical sketches and military tactics.—Publisher

PETER STEHMAN
Patriotic Murder: A World War I Hate Crime for Uncle Sam
 Potomac Books, 2018
 R 977.386 S817P

Robert Prager, a lonely German immigrant searching for the American dream, was probably the most shameful U.S. casualty of World War I. From coast to coast, Americans had been whipped into a patriotic frenzy by a steady diet of government propaganda and hate-mongering. In Collinsville, Illinois, an enraged, drunken mob hung Prager from a tree just after midnight on April 5, 1918. Coal miners in the St. Louis suburb would show the nation they were doing their patriotic part—that they, too, were fighting the fight. And who would stop them anyway? Not the alderman or businessmen who watched silently. Not the four policemen who let Prager from their custody, without drawing a weapon. And who would hold the mob leaders accountable? Certainly not the jury that took just ten minutes to acquit them, all while a band played “The Star-Spangled Banner” in the courthouse lobby.

Peter Stehman sheds light on the era’s hijacking of civil liberties and a forgotten crime some might say has fallen prey to “patriotic amnesia.” Unfortunately, the lessons from Patriotic Murder on intolerance and hate still resonate today as anti-immigration rhetoric and über-nationalism have resurfaced in American political discussion a century later.

OF NOTE

Duncan receives MoSGA Certificate of Appreciation

H&G cataloger Sharion Duncan received the Missouri State Genealogical Association's Certificate of Merit at the organization's annual conference on Saturday, Aug. 3 in Columbia. The award is given annually for "exemplary and outstanding performance of duties related to Missouri genealogy and family history."

The award nomination noted that Duncan has cataloged or reviewed the cataloging of over 100,000 manuscripts, periodicals, maps, and microfilms, including difficult to catalog regional resources and foreign language materials. The records she creates are often copied and reused by catalogers all over the U.S. because of their significant attention to detail and usability. Her detailed cataloging is vital to the success of genealogical research in Missouri.

Sharion Duncan receives Certificate of Appreciation from MoSGA awards chair person, Mark Stauter at the 2019 conference.
